

Global Disclosure

Aspen University delivers academic programs primarily through online modalities and serves students across the United States and select international locations. However, availability and recognition of these programs outside the United States may be subject to local legal and regulatory constraints.

This disclosure is intended to provide guidance to international students who are considering or currently enrolled in Aspen University programs and to highlight limitations that may exist depending on a student's country or territory of residence.

The chart below is not exhaustive and reflects only those that the University has begun to research, or has contacted, or made a determination. In addition, while degrees conferred by the University are recognized in the United States, they may not be recognized in other countries. While the University works to carefully track compliance issues related to online global education, it is the student's responsibility to ensure compliance with their local laws and regulations and to understand current circumstances or special requirements.

International students are encouraged to research the policies pertaining to degree and licensure recognition in their home country or territory.

Important Considerations for International Students

Students located outside of the United States are responsible for understanding and complying with the following:

Local Recognition and Authorization

- While degrees conferred by Aspen University are recognized in the United States, they may not be recognized or considered equivalent in other countries. Students are responsible for confirming whether Aspen University's programs meet the educational or licensure requirements in their country or territory.

Technological Access

- Enrollment in the University programs requires reliable access to the internet and the use of online learning platforms. Some countries may restrict or block certain technologies, platforms, or websites used by the university. Students should verify accessibility prior to enrollment.

Tax and Legal Requirements

- Students may be subject to local taxes or legal reporting requirements as a result of enrolling in a U.S.-based distance education program. Aspen University does not provide tax guidance and recommends students consult local authorities.

Relocation Disclosure

- Students who relocate during their studies may be impacted by different authorization or regulatory requirements in the new jurisdiction. If you plan to relocate while enrolled, please contact your Academic Advisor in advance and keep your student portal address information up to date.

Military Students Abroad

Military students located outside the United States may be subject to host-country laws and agreements that could affect program access or participation. Students are advised to confirm these requirements based on their deployment location.

Program Limitations for International Students

Some Aspen University programs are not available to international students due to local restrictions, particularly those in the fields of:

- Nursing
- Public Health
- Psychology (Licensure-based programs)

We strongly suggest students confirm with local regulatory bodies whether online study in these areas is permitted and whether degrees obtained online are recognized for employment or licensure purposes in their jurisdiction.

Status Definitions

- Authorized: Aspen University has received formal approval or recognition from the appropriate government agency to offer distance education programs to students residing in the country or territory.
- Not Authorized: Indicates either a lack of required government approval for distance education delivery, or an institutional decision not to accept applicants from that region at this time.
- Under Review: Enrollment is currently on hold while Aspen University reviews applicable postsecondary education regulations in the country or territory.
- Authorization Not Required: The country does not require formal approval or registration for Aspen University to deliver distance education programs to students residing there.
